Authentic Brotherhood | Legacy Lab

Overview: We've recently explored how Christ shapes our leadership, our self-awareness, and our relationships. This session takes the next step by turning our focus outward—toward the people God has placed in our lives. Legacy is not just about what we accomplish, but what we intentionally pass on to others. As we reflect on Scripture and the examples we've seen, we'll consider what it means to entrust our faith, values, and experience to the next generation through simple, everyday moments that can have lasting impact.

Verse: "And what you've heard me teach in the presence of many witnesses, entrust to faithful men who will be able to teach others also." 2 Timothy 2:2 TPT

Presentation Overview:

- Legacy is shaped in moments of influence by what you say and how you show up.
- It's seen in what remains at the end—the relationships and impact on people that last.
- Is not accidental but entrusted and intentional. We are always passing something on.
- Legacy lives in people, not achievements and what continues because we were there.

Questions for Work as Worship

- Lou Gehrig had a moment to reflect on his life. What stood out to you from what he said? What seemed to matter most to him?
- He didn't talk about achievements or success. Why do you think it's so easy for us to focus on those things instead of the impact we have on people?
- Earlier we talked about the word "entrust." What are some things—faith, values, perspective, encouragement—that have been entrusted to you over the years?
- Who are the people in your life right now that you have an opportunity to entrust something to? (Family, friends, younger men, coworkers...)
- Legacy is often built through small, consistent moments rather than big speeches. What are some simple, everyday ways we can invest in someone else?
- What tends to hold us back from being more intentional in this area? Time, uncertainty, not feeling qualified, something else?
- If you were to have a moment like Lou Gehrig—looking back on your life—what would you hope is true about the people you influenced?
- What is one specific, intentional step you could take this week to invest in someone else? Who comes to mind?

Closing Prayer:

Father, thank You for the people You've placed in our lives. Help us to be intentional in investing in others and faithful to entrust what You've given us. Give us wisdom in the small moments and a heart for what truly lasts. May our lives reflect You as we influence those around us. Amen.
